

```
[
    "Free speech should mean that news media is never censored. To what extent do you agree with this statement?",
    "Democracy is the best form of government. Evaluate this view.", "\"Democracy is the ideal form of government but it is very difficult to achieve.\" Assess this statement.", "\"Freedom of the media is important in a democracy.\" To what extent do you agree?",
    "Assess whether a one-party system is an effective form of government.",
    "To what extent do you agree that democracy is the most effective way of governing a society?",
    "To what extent do you agree that rich corporations are now more powerful than governments?",
    "To what extent can a nation's written constitution safeguard people's rights?",
    "Voting in national and regional elections should be a legal requirement.
Discuss.",
    "\"Unlimited power is likely to corrupt the minds of those who possess it.\" To what extent do you agree?", "Circumstances produce great leaders when they are needed. Discuss.", "Protest groups have every right to adopt disruptive tactics. Examine this statement.",
    "There are no great leaders in the world today. Discuss.",
    "To what extent do individuals have the power to influence how your country is governed?", "Evaluate the contribution of any politician or political party to the development of your country.",
]
```

brainstorm

- democracy give a voice to the people
- perfect democracy is mathematically impossible
- a democracy where anyone can vote offers a path for tyrants, through manipulation, misinformation, smear campaigns, hate, aspiring dictators can get elected to positions where they have full power to convert the said democracy into a dictatorship e.g. Hitler
- In the typical democracy the vote of a highly educated scholar and the vote of an uneducated person prone to manipulation have the same value
- most people do not reflect on their choices, they do not weigh in the power of their ballot, they go to the polls and if the price of petrol is too expensive or eggs are too expensive for example, they'll just vote for the candidate making promises of fixing it without doing any sort of factual analysis

- charismatic leaders with dangerous ideas can easily win in a democracy that is fragmented e.g. right vs left
- in most democracies around the world, it is the top 1% that have the ultimate power, they can fund political campaigns and bribe/lobby to push their preferred candidates to success, while using their vast media empires to spread propaganda against the opponents
- in an ideal democracy, only people with a sound, rational, mind should be allowed to vote, but someone needs to decide what qualifies as sound and rational, which can paradoxically lead to worse results